NETWORKING

- Community-Campus Partnerships for Health (CCPH) <http://www.ccph.info>
CCPH is a nonprofit organization that promotes health (broadly defined) through partnerships between communities and higher educational institutions. CCPH is guided by principles of partnership that seek to balance power and share resources equitably among partners, achieve meaningful outcomes and transform all involved. CCPH offers numerous resources for community & academic partners, including a bi-weekly online newsletter, listservs, toolkits, training and technical assistance.
- Community Partner Listserv
<http://mailman.mcw.edu/mailman/listinfo/communitypartnerlistserv>
This listserv focuses on issues specific to the community partner perspective when engaged in community-higher education partnerships. It aims to support conversations among community partners who are seeking to bring about sustainable and systemic change.
- APHA Community-Based Public Health Caucus <http://www.cbphcaucus.org>
Affiliated with the American Association of Public Health (APHA), the Caucus was formed to support those involved in community-based public health. The Caucus is guided by the belief that Community lies at the heart of public health, and that interventions work best when they are rooted in the values, knowledge, expertise, and interests of the community itself and when partnerships pursue relationships based on mutual respect co-learning and equality.
- National Community-Based Organizations Network (NCBON)
This network for grassroots community-based organizations, affiliated with the APHA Community-Based Public Health Caucus, is committed to improving community health through university/agency partnerships and policy change. To become involved, sign up at <http://www.cbphcaucus.org>
