ASPH/CDC Project Examining Community Partnerships for Prevention Research

Corporate/Group Authorship Policy

Authorship Title: The Community Partnerships for Prevention Research Group

1. This authorship title will be used in place of individual names on all products, reports, presentations, articles, and other publications that result from the work of the 2002-2004 ASPH/CDC Project: "Examining Community Partnerships for Prevention Research".
2. All partner organizations who contributed to the products or publications referred to above will be listed alphabetically in an appendix to the product or publication. All individuals who contributed to the products or publications referred to above will be listed in alphabetical order under their partner organization affiliation.
3. The individuals listed in the appendix may include those who have been involved in past projects and/or who have been instrumental to this current project, but who did not necessarily contribute directly to the synthesis of information or writing of the product/publication.

Definitions:

These definitions used by Johns Hopkins University's Center for Clinical Trials have helped us to define the intention and understanding of our research group as we utilize a modified corporate authorship citation and a modified corporate authorship:

- 1." A form of corporate author citation in which the names of the individuals responsible for writing the work on behalf of the corporate entity appear in a footnote to the title page or in the credits or acknowledgments section of the work.
2. A citation in a bibliography or reference list in which individual names appear in relation to a corporate work."
- 3.A form of authorship in which the masthead attribution is to a corporate entity (eg, the XYZ Research Group), but where authors are listed elsewhere in the work (in the credits or acknowledgments section or in a footnote to the title page)."
