

Community-Engaged
Scholarship for Health
Collaborative

Fellow Collaborative members,

Attached are some materials that have been produced by the Faculty Development Work Group. Please review these prior to the meeting.

In our most recent discussions regarding the enclosed tables of activities at defined career levels, as well as faculty development resources by level and scope, we began a spirited discussion of what sorts of pathways faculty involved in community engaged scholarship have taken over the course of their careers. As a result, we would like to spend our time together in Nashville bringing you into that discussion. Our aim is to try and understand the various routes one might take into a career of service and community-engaged scholarship – and how to best support these faculty every step of the way. We have also attached a draft set of community-engaged scholarship competencies, which we would like to discuss during our session as well.

I can't resist adding that I have done all the thinking about this I plan to for a while. I promise NOT to think about it as I enjoy Egypt, including a cruise down the Nile over the next two weeks. Since you can't all be in Egypt with me, perhaps we can all go see the Parthenon together while we are in Nashville! (See <http://www.nashville.gov/parthenon/>).

The UNC team (minus our good colleague Carol Tresolini who managed to collapse a lung and can't fly) are looking forward to another productive meeting and seeing you all.

Best regards,

Lynn Blanchard for the Faculty Development Work Group
