Invited Speaker

Sherril Gelmon, DrPH, is Professor of Public Health in the Mark O. Hatfield School of Government at Portland State University (PSU), where she coordinates two masters degree programs in health administration and policy and serves as faculty member in the doctoral program. Sherril's current research relates to institutionalizing engagement through the establishment of models of faculty roles and recognition for community engaged scholarship. Additionally, Sherril has many years of evaluator experience, with projects including the US Department of Education's "Community Engaged Scholarship for Health Collaborative" and the "Faculty for the Engaged Campus" project (both through CCPH), and a study of PSU's revised faculty tenure and promotion policies. She served as an "Engaged Scholar" with Campus Compact, developing and studying assessment methodologies with national disciplinary associations initiating major efforts in service-learning and civic engagement, and is the lead author of the Campus Compact publication "Assessing the Impact of Service-learning and Civic Engagement." Sherril also serves as a CCPH senior consultant.
