KAISEREDU.ORG AWARDS STUDENTS FOR BEST ESSAYS DESIGNING PRESIDENTIAL CANDIDATE HEALTH PLATFORM

KaiserEDU.org has announced five winners of its first annual student essay contest. Nearly 250 graduate and undergraduate students entered the contest where they prepared memos as a senior advisor to an actual or fictitious 2008 presidential candidate, proposing a health care platform and communication strategy for the candidate.

The judges included Scott McClellan, former White House Press Secretary for President Bush; Michael McCurry, former White House Press Secretary for President Clinton; Judy Feder, Professor and Dean of the Georgetown Public Policy Institute; Drew Altman, Kaiser President and CEO; and Diane Rowland, Kaiser Executive Vice President.

"It is inspiring to hear from so many students with such strong interest in health policy and politics," said Dr. Altman. "It's entirely possible that their health reform plans are better than those from us 'experts.'"

Entries were received from students enrolled at universities across the country as well as abroad in a wide range of disciplines including economics, ethics, public health, nursing, medicine, and public policy. The winning essays can be read online at <http://www.kaiseredu.org/essayprizes2007.asp>.

The winners from among the graduate student entries are:

- 1st Place: Brad Wright, University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, Health Policy and Administration
- 2nd Place: Ian Randall, University of Michigan School of Public Health, Health Management & Policy

The winners from among the undergraduate student entries are:

- 1st Place Tie: Shane Spencer, University of Maryland, Baltimore County, Major: Political Science
- 1st Place Tie: Robert Nelb, Yale University, Major: Ethics, Politics, and Economics
- 2nd Place: Shwetha Chagala, University of Texas at Austin, Major: Government

KaiserEDU.org (<http://www.kaiserEDU.org>), the Kaiser Family Foundation's website for students and faculty interested in health policy, reaches a wide range of individuals in academia, and also industry and government. The site presents a broad array of resources, including tutorials on health policy basics, issue modules on current topics under debate, and a directory of internships and fellowships.

MESSAGE FROM OUR EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

The National Institutes of Health (NIH) has released a request for applications (RFA) for a new program, Partners in Research – the latest in what appears to be an emerging trend at NIH toward greater recognition of the vital role that community engagement plays in research. Applications are due January 12, 2008.

The purpose of the program is to support two-year pilot and/or feasibility research studies of innovative activities designed to improve public understanding of biomedical and behavioral science, develop strategies for promoting collaboration between scientists and the community to improve the health of the public, and to identify the conditions that will enhance the effectiveness of such activities. The RFA (RFA-OD-07-001) is as an initiative of the Director of NIH, with all NIH Institutes and Centers participating. NIH intends to commit approximately $3 million in total costs in fiscal year 2008 to fund 35 to 40 applications.

Although the funding amounts are small, I think you'll be pleasantly surprised to see how the program is structured, reflecting recommendations of 23 community leaders experienced in community-higher education partnerships that participated in the April 2006 Community Partner Summit convened by CCPH: Each application must represent a partnership between community and scientific/academic principal investigators. For applications selected for funding, separate grants will be awarded to the academic/scientific institution and the community organization, with each partner serving as principal investigator of his/her respective grant. To view the RFA, visit <http://grants.nih.gov/grants/guide/rfa-files/RFA-OD-07-001.html>. For answers to frequently asked questions about the RFA, visit <http://publictrust.nih.gov/faq.cfm>

In my column in the September 28, 2007 issue of Partnership Matters newsletter (http://depts.washington.edu/ccph/PM\_092807.html#MessageED) I wrote about how the Community Partner Summit Policy Work Group has taken seriously its charge of helping to ensure that community partners are involved in decision making about federal funding for community-higher education partnerships and able to access funding directly. It is imperative that NIH hear not only from their usual constituencies in universities and academic medical centers, but also from community-based organizations and community members that are key stakeholders if not often partners in the $22.4 billion annual taxpayer investment in the grants awarded by NIH. In the latest opportunity for public comments on its research agenda, NIH is seeking input by November 26, 2007 on current and emerging priorities in basic Behavioral and Social Sciences Research that may offer potential for improving and accelerating health research and its impact on the health of the Nation. Comments may be submitted online at <http://www.bSSRresponse.com/>

With our growing membership from outside of the United States, this news from NIH may not be that helpful. In the next issue of Partnership Matters newsletter, we will do a "round up" of international funding sources for community-higher education partnerships. If you have suggestions of funding sources we should include, please email them to me directly at sarena@u.washington.edu. A continuously updated list of funding announcements appears on our Funding Opportunities Webpage at <http://depts.washington.edu/ccph/fundingopps.html>

NEWS FROM CCPH

CCPH Board Meets in Boston, October 18-20 New Board Chair and Chair-Elect Begin Their Terms

The CCPH Board of Directors had a productive meeting on the campus of Northeastern University in Boston, hosted by CCPH Board Chair Emeritus Elmer Freeman. At the meeting, Chuck Conner (far left in the photo), began his term as 2007-2008 board chair and Bobby Gottlieb (fourth from right) began her term as board chair-elect. Kudos went to Ella Greene-Moton (third from right) for her exemplary term as 2006-2007 board chair. As usual, the board connected with local CCPH members and invited guests for a networking reception.

Call for Nominations for 2008 CCPH Annual Award Nominations due February 12, 2008

The CCPH Award recognizes exemplary partnerships between communities and higher educational institutions that build on each other's strengths to improve higher education, civic engagement, and the overall health of communities. The intent of the award is to highlight the power and potential of community-campus partnerships as a strategy for social justice. The award recognizes partnerships that strive to achieve the systems and policy changes needed to overcome the root causes of health, social and economic inequalities.

The 2008 award will be presented before an international audience of community and campus partners at the Community-University Exposition, May 4-7, 2008 in Victoria, British Columbia, Canada. CCPH is a core sponsor of the conference, whose theme is "Community-University Partnerships: Connecting for Change."

Award nominations are due February 12, 2008. Partnerships must nominate themselves, may be from any country or nation, and need not be members of CCPH.

For more information, visit the CCPH Award website at <http://depts.washington.edu/ccph/awards.html>

CALLS FOR PAPERS & PRESENTATIONS

Listed below are NEW announcements only. To view all previously listed announcements, please visit CCPH's CALLS FOR PAPERS & PRESENTATIONS PAGE

NEW Call for Presentation Abstracts: Community Development Society (CDS) Annual International Conference - Deadline: October 31, 2007 – Letter of Intent - The annual CDS conference provides an opportunity for students, practitioners, researchers, and policymakers to share experiences, expertise, and/or research findings on strategies to improve the process and practice of community development. The conference takes place June 22-25, 2008 in Saskatoon, SK, Canada. The theme of the conference is "Conversation, Collaboration and Democracy - Creative Community Engagement." <http://www.comm-dev.org/>

NEW Call for Manuscripts: Cases Journal - Deadline: December 3, 2007 – Letter of Intent - Cases is a student-edited, peer-reviewed journal that is currently seeking submissions for Volume 2. The journal publishes case studies of projects and programs in public health communication and social marketing. This is a unique opportunity for graduate students interested in health communication and social marketing. By preparing a case that is selected for publication they will contribute to the field, become first author on a peer-reviewed publication, and possibly win a $1000 cash award to be given for the best paper in Volume 2. Graduate students from any discipline, and any region of the world, are encouraged to participate. <http://www.casesjournal.org/>

NEW Call for Articles: Communication or Relationships in Healthcare - Deadline: Multiple - Medical Encounter is an academic journal of the American Academy on Communication in Healthcare that publishes scholarly and artistic works relating to relationships in healthcare. Medical Encounter reaches patients, practitioners, teachers, researchers, policymakers and leaders in the healthcare environment. Publishing in Medical Encounter is a great way to get early exposure for your work and ideas, and can lend credibility to subsequent efforts at funding and publication. <http://www.aachonline.org/publications/medicalencounter>

NEW Call for Narratives: Reflective Practice - Deadline: Multiple - Patient Education and Counseling, an international journal, publishes selected narratives on reflective practice. Reflective Practice provides a voice for physicians and other healthcare providers, patients and their family members, trainees and medical educators. The title emphasizes the importance of reflection in our learning and how our patient care and own self-care can be improved through reflective practice, similar to other health care provider skills. <http://ees.elsevier.com/pec>

Macrosocial Determinants of Population Health

Macrosocial Determinants of Population Health includes 23 chapters by 33 internationally recognized experts and is organized into three sections. The chapters in the first section each take an in-depth look at a single macrosocial determinant, ranging from globalization to the media. The second section considers methodologic issues in exploring macrosocial factors, and the third section proposes a framework for thinking about macrosocial determinants of population health and demonstrates the application of the framework through innovative case study examples.

Acting Civically: From Urban Neighborhoods to Higher Education

Civic engagement, defined as individual and collective action to identify public issues and participate in public life, has been a hotly contested subject in recent years. Beginning with a chapter by the editors that maps current key issues and main research questions, contributors to this volume counter claims of civic decline to show how, when, where, and why people act civically in multiple ways in various settings and contexts. From the local level of urban neighborhoods to the large scale institutions of health and higher education, this book documents how Americans actively shape public concerns. Attentive to matters of race and class, this book will be of interest to anyone who wants to gain a deeper understanding of civic engagement in relation to civil society and politics, and to its theory and practice. The book will be useful in a wide range of courses including those in Political Science, Sociology, Urban and Community Studies, Education, American Studies, Race and Ethnic Studies, and Nonprofit Studies.
