Dear CCPH friends and colleagues,

After considerable reflection, I have decided to step down as executive director of CCPH at the end of this calendar year. My husband and I will be moving to Toronto where he has accepted a position that offers him a significant career opportunity.

Having served CCPH from its inception over a decade ago, this has been an incredibly difficult decision to make. It has been a privilege and pleasure to have played a part in the development of this unique and special organization. Relationships are at the core of CCPH, and I will treasure most the friends I have made over the years and how much I have learned from them. I would like to especially recognize the CCPH staff who have demonstrated a deep commitment to our mission and have worked tirelessly to support our members and programs.

I realize that transitions like this one – when a founder leaves and new leadership steps in – have their inherent risks. They also present enormous opportunities to be creative and visionary. We are all invested in CCPH’s continued success. I ask you to join in helping CCPH remain vibrant and strong as it enters its second decade of advancing health equity through community-campus partnerships.

Sincerely,

Sarena D. Seifer
Executive Director
