Dr. Frohe will be sharing methods around Ecological Momentary Assessment (EMA) design and will discuss findings from her dissertation study on the development and testing of a cognitive bias-retraining smartphone application. She will discuss the lessons she learned through this study design process and share her future directions that aim to connect marginalized communities through remote access to care.

We encourage you to attend and provide your thoughts!

For more information, contact cfareuw.edu