

The Department of Biology and Geology at Baldwin Wallace announces a tenure track, assistant professor position in biology, to begin August 2015. The Department seeks an individual with experience in and commitment to excellence in undergraduate teaching, student advising and directing undergraduate research. Ph.D. in ecosystem studies, ecology, or related field required. The successful candidate will be responsible for teaching sections of the Principles of Biology I and II for majors, participating in teaching sections of advanced, ecologically related courses for majors and developing new upper level biology courses for majors in the candidate's area of specialization. Additionally, candidates will participate in teaching the University's First Year Experience (FYE) and courses for non-majors as the need arises. Candidates with a willingness to participate in the Department's study abroad programs are especially encouraged to apply.

Founded in 1845, Baldwin Wallace University is an independent, coeducational university in the liberal arts tradition. Located 15 miles southwest of downtown Cleveland, Baldwin Wallace enrolls approximately 3,000 full-time undergraduate day students, 400 part-time students in evening and weekend programs, and 600 graduate students. Baldwin Wallace University recently completed an extensive 27 million dollar renovation of the science facilities (<http://www.bw.edu/news/wilker-telfer-ward/>) to assist in educating and providing hands on research experience to over two hundred students majoring in the biological sciences. The University offers an outstanding benefits package that includes funding for professional travel, summer grant opportunities, and tuition benefits for immediate family.

At Baldwin Wallace University we support and encourage diversity in a variety of forms. We value and appreciate inclusive excellence in the classroom, within extracurricular activities, and as we engage our community partners (<http://www.bw.edu/quickfacts/diversity/>).

The University seeks to attract a culturally and academically diverse faculty of the highest caliber. Baldwin Wallace University is an equal opportunity employer and does not discriminate because of race, creed, age, disabilities, national origin, gender or sexual orientation in the administration of any policies or programs.

The search committee will commence reviewing applications November 1st and will continue until the position is filled. Electronic applications are required. Application can be made online at <http://www.bw.edu/resources/hr/jobs/>. A single PDF or Word file containing a cover letter describing teaching experience and research interests that can be integrated at the undergraduate level, curriculum vitae, a list of 3 - 5 professional references, statement of teaching philosophy, teaching evaluations, unofficial transcripts and, if available, a representative selection of syllabi from courses taught must be uploaded at the time of application.
