

Global Resilience Challenge Grant Competition

The Global Resilience Challenge is a grant competition focused on developing and implementing locally-driven, high-impact solutions that build resilience in the Sahel, the Horn of Africa, and South and Southeast Asia. The Challenge recognizes that solutions for building resilience are as diverse and interrelated as the problems themselves from chronic malnutrition and health shockss, to climate change, to economic and political instabilities, and other vulnerabilities.

THE CHALLENGE WILL OPERATE IN THREE STAGES:

Stage 1: Diverse, cross-sectoral, multi-disciplinary teams assemble and apply with a pre-proposal that identifies the critical obstacles to building resilience (Deadline November 21, 2014). Teams who best demonstrate an understanding of their region and the commitment, creativity, and capacity of their members to address barriers to resilience will be invited to advance to the next stage.

Stage 2: Selected teams will receive funding to further develop their problem statement and construct a bold, scalable and sustainable solution for Stage 3 funding. Also during this stage, selected problem statements will be made public and new teams will be invited to enter the competition with proposed solutions for a subset of Stage 3 funding.

Stage 3: The most innovative, high impact and transformative solutions will receive funding for implementation and teams will have the chance to turn their ideas into reality. For details, refer to <http://globalresiliencepartnership.org> and download the guidelines in PDF form. Follow us on twitter at @grp_resilience.