

Applications are invited for a tenure track assistant professor in the Department of Biology at Bradley University. The position will begin August 2015.

The successful candidate will contribute to teaching evolution, ecology and environmental biology courses at both the undergraduate and master's levels, and will be expected to maintain an active research program in collaboration with students.

Candidates must possess a Ph.D. in Biology or a related field, and two years of postdoctoral experience. Preference will be given to candidates with a focus on sustainability concerns or a background in evolutionary biology. The successful candidate will be expected to teach upper-level courses in evolution, sustainability, ecological modeling, or courses in their area of specialization, in addition to general biology courses. The candidate will be expected to establish a productive research program in their area of expertise, seek funding for research as appropriate, and contribute to the broader Biology curriculum. Successful candidates will be expected to help sustain the University's emphasis on student-faculty scholarship collaboration. Applicants must demonstrate a strong commitment to undergraduate teaching and research, and the promise of scholarly and pedagogical excellence in a liberal arts and sciences setting.

Please submit a letter of application, curriculum vitae, graduate and undergraduate transcripts, statement of teaching interests, research plan, and three letters of reference to:

Dr. Sherri Morris, Chair, Biology Department
