Since 2003 over 200 students, residents and researchers have participated in our international field experience and exchange programs in global health. These experiences have ranged from clinical observation and research to public health practicum and community-based projects.

The Department of Global Health will continue to offer opportunities through the Global Health Resource Center to undergraduate, graduate, professional students as well as residents and post doctoral fellows. Please make an appointment with the Global Health Resource Center to learn more about global health opportunities and funding resources.

Weekly updates on available opportunities are posted on the 'globalhealth' list serv.

We also coordinate:

International Medical Student Exchange

For international medical students (Kenya, Peru, Japan, Australia) to participate in medical rotations at hospitals in Seattle

Global Health Pathway

Certificate-based program for medical students interested in global health

Study Abroad & Exchange: Find a program or experience abroad in the global health field and identify resources for travel preparation

Career Guidance: Connect with mentors and career contacts in global health as well as seek assistance with career development and job search

Referrals: local and global health organizations and colleagues

Communication: Sign up on our listservs and review our website resources
