Seattle Port Feels Full Strike Effect

Third Union Joins Tie-up

Seattle was a "ghost" port yesterday as the West Coast maritime tie-up took full effect.

Docks were vacant; piers and terminals shut down; not a winch rattled. Only three commercial freighters, all Alaska vessels, were trapped in port when longshoremen topped work at 12:01 a.m.

Fifteen to 20 deep sea cargo ships scurried out of the harbor before the deadline.

President Truman said yesterday the White House is "powerless" to take any further steps in the West Coast shipping strike. International News Service reported from Washington, D.C., that this followed formal dissolution of the 30-day injunction by Federal Judge George Harris in Seattle.

The strike ban, issued under the Taft-Hartley Act, expired yesterday morning.

First longshore picket squads are dispatched to Seattle piers to yesterday, following a strike key meeting at the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union hall.

The Marine Cooks and Stewards' Union sent out pickets shortly after 4 p.m. yesterday.

A third union, the Independent Marine Firemen's Union, joined the strike yesterday as wage parley blew in San Francisco.

Seattle members of the firemen's union were assigned to picket duty.

Girl Killed as Car Struck By Truck

A girl, 7, was fatally injured late last night when the car in which she was riding was struck by a gasoline tanker two miles west of North Bend.

The child, Janice Nelson, died in Snoqualmie Hospital.

Her mother, Mrs. Mae Sather, driver of the car, suffered a pelvic fracture. An older sister, Judy Nelson, 11, was released from the hospital after treatment for face cuts. Their home is at North Bend.

Car Standing On Sideroad

Coroner's deputies said they learned the accident occurred when the tanker, eastbound on the highway, swerved to avoid a machine making a left-hand turn ahead of it.

The tanker turned left, also, the deputies said, and collided with the Sather machine, stopped on the sideroad, waiting to enter the highway.

The tanker driver was identified as Donald Cook, 10621 3d Ave. S.W.

Coroner John P. Brill Jr. ordered Cook and the occupants of the car ahead of the tanker to report to his office at 9 a.m. today for statements on the accident.

starting at 12:55 p.m. today, John D. Hatcher was named chairman of the strike committee.

The International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union, which represents the employees at the Port of Seattle, issued a statement saying they would be picketing from 6 a.m. to 10 p.m.

Meanwhile, the strike is expected to continue for several days, with workers saying they are prepared to walk the picket line.

In Washington, President Eisenhower has ordered federal officials to mediate the dispute.

World Getting Tipsy?

It's an Icy Thought

We report for work yesterday morning in the snow, and find the world is in a serious situation. People are getting tipsy. The weather is cold, and there is a lot of ice on the streets. People are slipping and falling, and the sidewalks are covered with ice. It's a slippery situation.

The temperature dropped sharply last night, and there is a strong chance of more snow today. People are advised to be careful and to avoid slipping on the ice.
