GENERAL ANNOUNCEMENTS

Firearm Violence Prevention Leadership Summit Summary

Dr. Fred Rivara and Dr. Ali Rowhani-Rahbar were among the leaders of the Firearm Violence Prevention Leadership Summit, sponsored by King County DOH, Seattle Mayor's office, and King County Executive's office. This summit created a common understanding of existing data that can be used for the development of strategies and actions to prevent firearm violence.

Among the data presented at the summit:

- More than 130 people die each year in King County as a result of firearm use, meaning more people in King County are killed by gun violence than by car crashes.
- An estimated 26,500 households in King County store at least one firearm that is unlocked and loaded.
- 14% of King County high school students say it would be easy for them to get a handgun if they wanted.
- 68 children were lost to gun violence in King County from 1999-2012—two-thirds were murdered, and one-third died by their own hand because they could get hold of a firearm.

Strategies and actions discussed at the summit include youth violence prevention, domestic violence prevention, suicide prevention, and data sharing.

Dr. Fred Rivara quoted in the New York Times

Dr. Fred Rivara, MD, MPH (Professor of Pediatrics, Adjunct Professor of Epidemiology) was quoted in an article in the NY Times about increased concussion awareness, how high school sports injuries are handled, and the impact of sidelining players. More and more high school sports teams have been unable to play due to injuries, forcing teams to forfeit games or even cut playing seasons short by cancelling games altogether. There has also been an increase in concerns about injuring fellow players in practice, causing participation numbers to drop.

IRB UPDATES

Flexibility Policy

The Flexibility Policy establishes the Human Subjects Division's intent to be more flexible about which specific federal regulations are applied to non-federally-funded research. Beginning December 1, the UW IRB plans to begin granting longer IRB approval periods (three years instead of one) to minimal risk research that is not federally supported.

Flexibility Initiative: Prisoner Research

Implemented October 31, 2014

1. "Incidental" prisoners. For research that is not federally supported, the UW IRBs now apply a "light" version of the federal requirements about subjects who become incarcerated after they have already enrolled in a study.
2. Exception to informed consent. Enrollment of prisoners is not allowed in more-than-minimal risk emergency medicine research that involves a special waiver ("exception") of informed consent.

Marijuana Research Guidance

Implemented October 1, 2014

Washington State law was amended in 2012 to permit the use, sale, processing, and production of marijuana for recreational purposes in addition to medical uses. A task force of UW faculty, legal, and administrative experts have created a guidance document for the UW research community about the conditions under which marijuana research may be conducted.

Clinical Trial Recruitment Website

The Institute of Translational Health Sciences (ITHS) is launching a new website in October 2014 to support recruitment for clinical trials. Once a trial is approved to post, the research team can be contacted directly by potential participants who visit the recruitment site.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

Acknowledgements for the UW Medicine IT Staff

We would like to acknowledge the UW Medicine IT staff for their help in getting our new Methods Core computers set up, especially since it was a more complicated task than the usual set up, and they were extremely courteous and pleasant to work with throughout the process. We also want to thank them for helping us think creatively about meeting our future computer hardware needs as we try to manage on a tight operating budget.

HIPRC IN THE NEWS

HIPRC Core Member Mary Fan in the News on Sexual Assault Reform and Domestic Violence Gun Restraining Orders

Mary D. Fan, JD, MPhil (Professor of Law) has been quoted in a New York Times (NYT) article titled, "The Challenge of Defining Rape". As states across the country try to figure out how to more effectively address the problem of sexual assault, they are looking at the definition of sexual misconduct and what that entails. For example, until 2012, the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) still considered rape a crime committed solely against women, a definition that has since been expanded. Defining consent, especially when there is alcohol involved, is also a challenge to amending sexual assault laws. In some parts of the country, not just force, but resistance is required for an act to qualify as rape. In such cases, merely saying "no" would not in itself be considered sufficient resistance.

The article goes into detail on how different states are changing or considering changing their laws as they pertain to sexual assault, such as dropping the requirement of proof of physical aggression (several states), eliminating spousal exemptions from rape (Washington), needing affirmative rather than negative consent (New Jersey, California universities, New York universities), or considering surrounding circumstances (New York).

Original article: http://www.nytimes.com/2014/10/12/sunday-review/being-clear-about-rape.html?\_r=2

Fan has also been quoted recently in a Wall Street Journal (WSJ) Blog article titled, "Are Restraining Orders an Answer to Mass Violence?". Under federal law and many state laws, people guilty of a felony or misdemeanor domestic-violence crime are banned from owning guns, but according to Fan, many domestic-violence incidents do not end up in court. Her ideal solution is for courts to issue restraining orders that allow for a forced disarming. However, these restraining orders aren't issued frequently enough, for reasons that include: fear of retaliation for getting a protective order, lack of resources, mistrust of the judicial system, and general misunderstanding that protective orders are ineffective. Fan says that the way to overcome this is to better train law-enforcement to educate and encourage domestic-violence victims to seek a restraining order. The article quotes her paper, "Disarming the Dangerous: Preventing Extraordinary and Ordinary Violence", soon to be published in the Indiana Law Journal.

New Associate Member, Dr. Samuel Browd, on Football Helmet Development

Dr. Samuel Browd, MD, PhD (Associate Professor of Neurosurgery) was mentioned in an article about his UW startup, VICIS, Inc., that won a $500,000 research award from the Head Health Challenge II, for their football helmet designed to mitigate the forces likely to cause concussion. The 2014 Head Health Challenge II received more than 500 proposals from 19 countries.

Dr. Browd is a pediatric neurosurgeon, medical director of the Seattle Children's Sports Concussion Program, is an initial founder of the VICIS team, and co-invented the technology with Per Reinhall, PhD (UW Professor of Mechanical Engineering and Department Chair).

The Head Health Challenge is a search for solutions that help prevent, measure, and detect brain injury that is sponsored by the NFL, apparel maker Under Armour, and General Electric.

HIPRC to Attend Rainier Scholars "Careers in Health" Event

Dr. Nathalia Jimenez, MD, MPH (Assistant Professor of Anesthesiology) will be a member of the brown bag lunch panel at the Rainier Scholars Career in Health event on Tuesday, January 6th, where various organizations answer general questions about careers in health and or share opportunities/programs that are available through their affiliation.

Rainier Scholars is a non-profit that cultivates the academic potential and leadership skills of hard-working, low-income students of color. By creating access to transformative educational opportunities and providing comprehensive support to scholars and families, Rainier Scholars hopes to increase college graduation rates and empower new generations of leaders.

Early Career Injury Investigators Research Network (EIIRN)

We are happy to announce our new mailing list and monthly gatherings for researchers in the early stages of their career who are interested in injury, trauma, and violence. EIIRN provides peer support and a multidisciplinary network of junior researchers with shared interests in injury. Graduate students, residents, fellows and junior faculty are all welcome.

Our first get-together will be a happy hour on Wednesday, December 3rd at 4PM, location TBD.

To subscribe to the EIIRN mailing list and get notified of future events, visit <https://mailman1.u.washington.edu/mailman/listinfo/eiirn>.
