

Northwest Collegiate Climbing Challenge

(NC³)

What Is It?

The NC³ is a series of climbing events that allow students to challenge themselves and represent their university, club, or team at the same time. Currently the NC³ events are: UW's "Rain City Send", Central Washington's "Ropeless Rodeo", and Western Washington's "Vedi, Vendi, Ascendi". Individuals, university teams, clubs may participate in these events and accrue individual and team points. At the finale of the events the NC³ crowns individual and university champions.

Who's Eligible

The NC³ is open to all university and college students of the Pacific Northwest and beyond. Just visit one of the event's websites mentioned above, download the eligibility form, have it verified by your Program Coordinator and fax it in. Then just show up to as many competitions as possible, represent yourself and your school.

How Does Scoring Work?

The scoring is simple. The top five places in each category score points for their university. Your individual score from each event is submitted to a series scorekeeper, and then tallied after the final event. The man and woman with the highest point total will be declared the NC³ Champions. The university with the most points is declared the NC³ University Champion.

Can My University's Competition Join the NC³?

YES!! Torment your Program Coordinator to have your competition become a sanctioned NC³ event. It's easy, just contact Matt Jensen (information below) and ask for event sanctioning information.

Contact Information

Matt Jensen
University of Washington
mcjensen@u.washington.edu
206.616.2083

Ryan Hopkins
Central Washington University
Ryan.Hopkins@cwu.edu
509.963.3536

Aislinn Ronaghan
Western Washington University
Aislinn.Ronaghan@wwu.edu
360.650.4286