Dear ISEI Members and Conference Attendees,

The major theme of this ISEI conference, “Children’s Rights and Early Intervention,” is in many ways a landmark theme for our society and our field. The convergence of conceptual frameworks and empirical findings in the areas of child development, risk and disability, and intervention have led to the unequivocal conclusion that vulnerable children and their families benefit in so many ways from participation in high quality early intervention programs. Along with international treaties and initiatives in conjunction with the establishment of country-level innovative models and policies, the field of early intervention is now poised to have a world-wide and meaningful impact. Indeed, I believe we can argue persuasively that early intervention must be seen as a fundamental right for all vulnerable children and their families.

Supporting the expression of a child's full potential -- a central goal of all early intervention programs -- can only be accomplished in the context of a child’s and family’s full participation in all aspects of community life. Advocating for and promoting full participation is therefore an equally critical goal of early intervention and should also be considered as a fundamental right of all children.

We all fully understand the multiple challenges that exist to achieve full participation, especially in the realm of social inclusion. Ulf Janson, to whom this conference is dedicated, has provided the most thoughtful and creative international leadership in the area of social inclusion, and his contributions will be discussed and recognized throughout this ISEI conference. Indeed, Ulf’s knowledge and values are well represented at our conference and reveal the extraordinary impact of his legacy.

A special debt of gratitude is owed to Anders Gustavsson and Eva Björck-Åkesson for all of their efforts to support this conference. Thanks also to the ISEI Coordinating Committee for assistance in scientific reviews and for putting together such a stimulating program. It is our hope that this conference will further energize our international community to promote early intervention and to see it as a right of all vulnerable children.

Best regards,

Mike Guralnick
Chair, ISEI
Dear ISEI Members and Conference Attendees,

It is an honor and a great pleasure for Stockholm University to host the next ISEI conference, "Children’s Rights and Early Intervention". For a long time, child development and different kinds of interventions in support of children with disabilities and children at risk have been an important topic in education and research at Stockholm University.

From a Swedish perspective -- where important parts of early intervention are carried out within the frame of general welfare -- inclusion and full participation of children and their families are highly valued goals. The ISEI conference offers important opportunities for exchange among researchers from all over the world, and the fact that the conference takes place in Stockholm makes it easier for researchers and professionals from the Nordic countries to participate.

We are especially pleased with ISEI’s decision to dedicate this conference to our loved and most appreciated colleague, Ulf Janson, who himself dedicated most of his professional life to issues of early intervention and children’s rights. Ulf strongly supported that Stockholm University should host the next ISEI conference and even if we are very sorry that he is not with us any more, we are happy that one of his important projects will soon be realized. As a close colleague of his in the Department of Education, I know that he would have been proud and happy to wish you all welcome to the conference.

Many thanks to Ann-Charlotte Smedler, Ann-Christin Cederborg, and Margareta Ahlstrom, who as heads of the Departments of Psychology, Child and Youth Studies, and Special Education have contributed to the preparations for the conference within the local organizing committee. We wish you all very welcome to Stockholm and the ISEI conference in June 2016.

Poster Session and Welcome Reception: Wednesday, June 8, 5:30 – 7:00pm

The Poster Session and Welcome Reception will be held on the Foyer and Galleriet levels of Aula Magna. Wine and appetizers will be served. This event promises to provide a unique opportunity to discuss critical issues and advances in our field.

Reception and Tour of Stockholm City Hall: Thursday, June 9, 7:00-9:00pm

The City of Stockholm has graciously invited all ISEI members and guests attending the Conference to a reception to be held at the Stockholm City Hall. After a welcoming ceremony, there will be a light buffet and a guided tour of this historic building. City Hall was completed in 1923 and is the venue of the annual Nobel Prize banquet, held in the Blue Hall. It is one of Stockholm’s major tourist attractions and we are honored to have this opportunity for a private visit.

Closing Session: Friday, June 10, 4:15 - 4:45pm

The Closing Session will provide an opportunity for the Coordinating Committee and attendees to discuss and plan future goals and activities for ISEI.
City Hall Special Event Directions
Thursday, June 9th, 7:00-9:00 pm

The City Hall is located at Ragnar Östbergs plan 1

Going to the City Hall via public transportation?

The City Hall (Stadshuset) is situated on the island Kungsholmen in the centre of Stockholm.

Buses nr 3 and 62 stop right in front of the City Hall at Hantverkargatan 1. The bus stop is called Stadshuset.

The closest metro station is Rådhuset (the blue line). It takes about 8 minutes to walk to the City Hall from the Central Station, and 5 minutes from the stop Rådhuset.

Parking

The closest visitor’s parking is on Norr Mälarstrand. Parking for people with disabilities is located at Ragnar Östbergs plan 1-5 on the west side of the City Hall.

Accessibility

There is no wheelchair ramp at the main entrance at Hantverkargatan 1, however there is a ramp located at the large staircase in the middle of the Courtyard. Please call +46 8 508 290 58 if you need to use the ramp for assistance. During the tour, it is possible to access the different floors via lifts.

Performance By: Adolf Fredrik's Music School Youth Chorus
Wednesday Morning, June 8th

One institution which is a significant proponent of choral singing and choral music in Sweden is the Adolf Fredrik's Music School. It is a choir school for children and youth between the ages of 10 and 16 years old. The international appeal of the Youth Chorus is evidenced by several prizes won in choral competitions all around the globe. We are pleased they will perform at the ISEI Conference during our Opening Session.

“For us at Adolf Fredrik's Music School the song is at the center of the meeting between people. A collective musicianship trains the individual in loyalty, solidarity and respect for each other's differences. Music is a universal language.”

Adolf Fredrik’s school for music classes in Farsta began in 2015, and has 100 students today. The school's focus is on choral singing. Song is regarded as a way to engage our community of diverse students on equal terms. Through music, sensitive and responsive world citizens are educated.

Early Childhood Intervention: Engaging Children, Families, Preschools, and Health Professionals in Sweden

Eva Björck-Åkesson is a professor of special education at Jönköping University with a focus on early childhood intervention and is secretary general of the Committee for Educational Sciences at the Swedish Research Council. She has been Dean of the School of Education and Communication at Jönköping University and vice-president of Mälardalen University. Dr. Björck-Åkesson is a member of the Swedish National Commission for UNESCO and has been involved in developing the WHO classification of Functioning, Disability and Health - version for Children and Youth (ICF-CY). She is also one of the founders and scientific directors of the research group CHILD where collaborative research is conducted among the fields of education, special education, health psychology, health care sciences, and disability studies. Dr. Björck-Åkesson’s research is based on an ecological transactional model and a biopsychosocial perspective and is focused on the preschool as an environment for participation, interaction, and development in the context of early intervention in Sweden.

Building Sustainable National Systems for Early Childhood Intervention

Emily Vargas-Barón directs The RISE Institute that assists nations to develop strategic plans, systems, and programs for early childhood intervention (ECI) and hosts the Early Childhood Development (ECD) Task Force of the Global Partnership on Children with Disabilities. She consults in the fields of ECI and ECD in nations of Eastern Europe, Latin America, South East Asia, and Sub-Saharan Africa. Dr. Vargas-Barón conducts research on ECI policy planning and systems development, program outcomes, and the scaling up of ECI programs. She has authored numerous books, chapters, and articles on ECI and ECD. Previously she was the Deputy Assistant Administrator of USAID for education, training, and telecommunications and the founder of Any Baby Can Child and Family Resource Center in Austin, Texas, where she developed one of the first ECI programs in the United States. Dr. Vargas-Barón received her doctorate in Anthropology from Stanford University where she was also an Associate of the Stanford International Development Education Center. She has been a professor at the University of Washington, Javeriana University in Bogotá, Colombia, and the University of Texas at Austin.
Pia Rebello Britto is Global Chief and Senior Advisor, Early Childhood Development, UNICEF, New York Headquarters. She was formerly Assistant Professor, Yale University, and has worked on developing, implementing and evaluating early childhood programmes and policies around the world. In particular, she has strengthened the application of evidence for programming, promoted the role of governance and finance of national systems in achieving equity, access and quality, developed and evaluated models for implementation of quality early childhood services and supported the role of parents and caregivers, including women’s economic empowerment. Most recently, Dr. Britto is involved in work examining the relationship between early childhood and peace building. Dr. Britto has conducted research in the United States to understand the experience of early literacy development, early intervention program evaluations, and identity development of Muslim and Arab children. Dr. Britto is the recipient of several national and international grants and awards in recognition for her work and has published numerous books, articles, chapters and reports, and has presented extensively at conferences, meetings and workshops (academic and non-academic) globally.
“Tier 2” Newborn Screening for Intellectual and Developmental Disabilities

Don Bailey, Ph.D.
United States

Abstract
For many children with intellectual and developmental disabilities, parents and professionals undergo a protracted “diagnostic odyssey,” first to determine whether the child has a disability, and then to determine its cause. Often the length of this process precludes or delays access to early intervention. A voluntary “Tier 2” newborn screening program could identify children with some conditions much earlier, but the challenges and costs associated with such a program have been prohibitive. We have been doing the pilot work and planning necessary to implement such a program on a large scale. This Master Lecture presents a rationale for Tier 2 newborn screening, reports data from ongoing planning and pilot studies, and discusses the potential implications for developing a stronger rationale for earliest possible early intervention.

Is Potential for Recovery from an Early Brain Injury Fact or Fiction?

James Blackman, M.D., M.P.H.
United States

Abstract
Cerebral palsy results from an injury to the brain in the fetal, newborn, or early infant stages of development. Recent animal research suggests that there is a window of brain plasticity within which the brain may recover partially, or even completely, from such an injury. With few exceptions, applications of this potential in humans have yet to be demonstrated. A range of treatments, from drugs to stem cells to various therapeutic interventions are being proposed and examined. Critical to the evaluation of all interventions are early detection of brain injury and sufficiently extended outcome measurements. This Master Lecture will review the current status of infant brain research as it pertains to early identification, evidence-based treatments, and potential for recovery and enhanced quality of life.

Early Developmental and Behavioral Screening: A Comprehensive Community-Based Systems Approach

Diane Bricker, Ph.D.
United States

Abstract
The importance of early detection for children at risk and with disabilities is well documented. Fundamental to the success of early detection are valid, reliable, and low-cost screening measures; however, even the best measures (in terms of psychometric properties and cost) cannot stand alone. Comprehensive, ongoing screening and monitoring is dependent upon the existence of an enveloping system that provides the necessary supports to ensure participation and follow-up of all children in a community. A system refers to a combination of parts that work together to form a unified, cohesive whole. The system to be discussed in this Master Lecture is composed of six separate but linked components: program goals, community awareness, contact and referral, assessment, follow-up, and evaluation. The components form a system through the overarching processes of coordinating and checking/verifying.

Interdisciplinary Professional Training in Early Intervention

Mary Beth Bruder, Ph.D.
United States

Abstract

The presence of a well trained workforce to meet the diverse needs of infants, young children, and their families is a critical variable in establishing high quality and effective early childhood intervention (ECI). This Master Lecture will focus on the competencies needed by interdisciplinary professional staff who design and deliver the various components of ECI. It will also focus on evidence-based adult learning methodologies for both pre-service (university based) personnel preparation programs, and in-service (continuing education) activities for those who serve infants and young children and families across a variety of home and inclusive early intervention settings.

Changing Children - Changing Services? From Rights to Responsibilities in Early Intervention

Barry Carpenter, O.B.E., Ph.D.
United Kingdom

Abstract

In the last decade Early Intervention professionals have consistently reported changes in the population of children with disabilities. The term ‘Complex Needs’ has arisen and is widely used to describe this new generation of children. Research from various disciplines has also recorded significant shifts in the profile of children’s needs, often resulting from changing causal bases, e.g., prematurity, alcohol or drug abuse, medical interventions, or rare syndromes. What does this mean for the world of Early Intervention? What are the implications for service design and delivery? This Master Lecture will consider the transformations that must occur in Early Intervention practice and service delivery if we are to truly enhance the development of young children with complex needs.

Dancing with Rhythm in Parent-Child Interaction

Ibrahim Halil Diken, Ph.D.
Turkey

Abstract

International studies have revealed that parent behaviors during interactions with their child explain a significant amount of variance with respect to engagement, quality of exchanges, and the developmental outcomes of their children. This is the case both for children with established developmental delays/disabilities and those at-risk for developmental delays/disabilities. Several factors defining effective parent-child interactions, especially the forms of parental behaviors or strategies, have been identified. In this Master Lecture, I will examine research that has defined these effective parent-child interactions.
Contributions of Developmental and Intervention Science to Early Intervention

Michael Guralnick, Ph.D.
United States

Abstract

The field of early intervention has now reached a major “integrative” phase in its development. Significant advances occur when findings from both developmental and intervention science can effectively inform practice. These domains will be examined in this Master Lecture and will consider the correspondence between developmental mechanisms and outcomes based on intervention science. This information can be used to form a foundation capable of enhancing the effectiveness of early intervention research and practice in community settings.

Inclusion: Are We Settling for Accommodation When We Should Be Intervening for Better Outcomes?

Coral Kemp, Ph.D.
Australia

Abstract

There has been a general acceptance of the merit of including young children with disabilities in generic early childhood services. Unfortunately, in many countries, early childhood educators or those supporting them do not necessarily possess the level of skill needed to ensure that children with disabilities, particularly those with high support needs, are participating meaningfully in preschool and childcare settings. Further, administrators who are steering policy development do not always understand the importance of planning individually for children with additional needs. Child engagement is an important goal for early childhood intervention because of the relationship that is thought to exist between engagement and learning. Interventions targeting the engagement of children with significant disabilities in inclusive early childhood settings - specifically children with intellectual disability and/or autism spectrum disorder - have been investigated by our team of researchers in collaboration with interventionists and educators. In this Master Lecture, the findings of our research will be presented and the implications for inclusive practice will be considered, specifically as these relate to the use of individualised program plans and evidence-based interventions.

Don’t Fix Me, Fix the Systems: Developing Early Intervention in St. Petersburg, Russia

Elena Kozhevnikova, Ph.D.
Russian Federation

Abstract

The development of early intervention in the Russian Federation starting from the Gorbachev Perestroika period (middle of 1980’s) until today will be discussed. A personal perspective will be provided in this Master Lecture as the presenter has played an active role during a period of extensive change in the political, social, cultural, developmental, and educational arenas among others. Special emphasis will be given to the specific role of early intervention in Russia as a first step to an inclusive and children’s rights oriented society and the role of international cooperation in developing early intervention in Russia.
Looking Forward and Back At Early Intervention and Hope: Parental Coping and Resilience

Malka Margalit, Ph.D.
Israel

Abstract

Early intervention activities for very young children with disabilities are frequently linked to developmental targets and goals. Satisfaction studies during early intervention often reveal high levels of satisfaction but the levels of satisfaction after several years are not typically examined. In this Master Lecture, I discuss a longitudinal design to explore what happens following the transition to kindergarten and primary school, especially how parents cope with new realities and challenges. Mothers’ hope for the future and memories of the past are compared. Of specific interest is the comparison of mothers’ self-perceptions and coping during the time their infants participated in early intervention with their self perceptions and the children’s development 5-10 years later.

Improving Care for Abandoned Children: From Research to Practice and Policy

Rifkat Muhamedrahimov, Ph.D.
Russian Federation

Abstract

Institutions for orphan children and children left without parental care in general are characterized by severe deficits in the sensitivity, responsivity, and stability of the caregiving environment. A considerable number of studies show that children reared in institutions are at substantial risk in various domains of functioning. Those with a substantial history of institutional care display a variety of long-term difficulties when placed with families. In this Master Lecture, the St. Petersburg-USA baby home research project will be discussed. This project demonstrated that improvements of the caregiving environment in institutions enhanced the behavioral and mental development of resident infants and young children as well as improved the longer-term outcomes for post-institutionalized children when they were subsequently placed into parental or substitute families. The state policy of the Russian Federation (RF) on caring for children without parental care has been largely directed at keeping children in birth families, placing children in different types of substitute families, and improving the quality of care in institutions for those children who reside there. The new RF policy concerning the living conditions in institutions requires that they should be close to several aspects of the family-like caregiving environment suggested in the baby home intervention project.
The Power of Experience in Child Development - Reconsidered
Franz Peterander, Ph.D.
Germany

Abstract

Daily experiences influence individuals understanding and insight. These experiences modify and determine personal beliefs and attitudes through a continuous process, and lead to the question of how one’s own experiences are perceived, interpreted, and processed. Children’s development is significantly influenced by a continuing “stream of experiences” - - from day to day and from situation to situation leading to children’s individual perspectives. It is this high level of individuality of each child that must draw the attention of educators and therapists to the everyday environmental life experiences of children, taking into account developmental theories and research findings. Using this perspective, in this Master Lecture the process of assessment and intervention with an individual child in moment-to-moment situations will be discussed.

Rethinking Professional Partnerships With Parents: Starting From What Parents Are Willing and Able To Do
Manfred Pretis, Ph.D.
Austria

Abstract

Early Childhood Intervention is faced with new challenges at the beginning of 21st century. Changing patterns of special educational needs and increasing mental health concerns of parents are among the factors that might ‘force' professionals to widen their methodological approaches towards complex interactions and interventions. Furthermore, in many developed and developing countries life situations of families are significantly changing because of labor market requirements, making it difficult to establish partnership models. Second generation research highlights that not everything fits each family. Consequently, this Master Lecture considers current thinking on partnership models and what we can learn from the answers provided by families.

UNCRC & ICF-CY: Defining and Documenting Universal Rights of Children
Rune Simeonsson, Ph.D., M.S.P.H.
United States

Abstract

In every society, assuring the rights of children to grow and develop is an implicit responsibility of families and society. The dependent status of young children, however, makes them uniquely vulnerable to deprivation of those rights; a vulnerability that is significantly increased for children whose development is compromised because of biological and environmental risks. The United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child (UNCRC) is a universal standard affirming the integrity and autonomy of the child based on rights to protection from harm, provision of nurture, and social justice to participate fully in society. A significant challenge in developed as well as developing countries is documentation of the extent to which the rights of children to intervention and support are realized. This presentation will describe the application of the International Classification of Functioning, Disability and Health - Children & Youth (ICF-CY) as a universal language of codes to document children’s rights to protection, provision, and participation within UNCRC as the basis for intervention.

Early Childhood Intervention: Engaging Children, Families, Preschools, and Health Professionals in Sweden

Eva Björck-Åkesson, Ph.D.

Eva Björck-Åkesson is a professor of special education at Jönköping University with a focus on early childhood intervention and is secretary general of the Committee for Educational Sciences at the Swedish Research Council. She has been Dean of the School of Education and Communication at Jönköping University and vice-president of Mälardalen University. Dr. Björck-Åkesson is a member of the Swedish National Commission for UNESCO and has been involved in developing the WHO classification of Functioning, Disability and Health - version for Children and Youth (ICF-CY). She is also one of the founders and scientific directors of the research group CHILD where collaborative research is conducted among the fields of education, special education, health psychology, health care sciences, and disability studies. Dr. Björck-Åkesson’s research is based on an ecological transactional model and a biopsychosocial perspective and is focused on the preschool as an environment for participation, interaction, and development in the context of early intervention in Sweden.

Taking Early Childhood Interventions Into the Sustainable Development Era

Pia Rebello Britto, Ph.D.

Pia Rebello Britto is Global Chief and Senior Advisor, Early Childhood Development, UNICEF, New York Headquarters. She was formerly Assistant Professor, Yale University, and has worked on developing, implementing and evaluating early childhood programmes and policies around the world. In particular, she has strengthened the application of evidence for programming, promoted the role of governance and finance of national systems in achieving equity, access and quality, developed and evaluated models for implementation of quality early childhood services and supported the role of parents and caregivers, including women’s economic empowerment. Most recently, Dr. Britto is involved in work examining the relationship between early childhood and peace building. Dr. Britto has conducted research in the United States to understand the experience of early literacy development, early intervention program evaluations, and identity development of Muslim and Arab children. Dr. Britto is the recipient of several national and international grants and awards in recognition for her work and has published numerous books, articles, chapters and reports, and has presented extensively at conferences, meetings and workshops (academic and non-academic) globally.
