ACADEMIC CLINICAL PATHOLOGISTS

The Department of Pathology and Laboratory Medicine at the University of Medicine and Dentistry of New Jersey-Robert Wood Johnson Medical School invites applications for one senior and one junior faculty position in the expanding Division of Clinical Pathology. The division is responsible for directing laboratory services at three hospitals, including Robert Wood Johnson University Hospital—the school’s 500-bed tertiary care core teaching hospital; the Cancer Institute of New Jersey; and affiliated Public Health laboratories. The successful candidate will share laboratory administrative responsibilities with other pathologists in the clinical laboratories, will participate actively in the educational programs of the Department teaching medical students, residents, and fellows, and will be expected to engage in productive research activities.

Candidates must be Board Certified in Clinical Pathology or a subspecialty of Clinical Pathology, or be board eligible. Experience or training in molecular pathology, medical microbiology and/or clinical chemistry is desired. Academic rank will be commensurate with the candidate’s qualifications and academic experience.

UMDNJ-Robert Wood Johnson Medical School is located in New Brunswick, NJ, centrally located between New York City and Philadelphia—each about an hour away by car or train. The Jersey Shore with Atlantic City, the Pine Barrens of Southern New Jersey, Revolutionary War battlefields, the Delaware Water Gap, Pennsylvania’s Pocono Mountains and New York’s Catskills are all within a two hour drive.

To apply please submit a curriculum vitae, a letter outlining your interests and experience, and the names of three (3) references to:
