

IF you WERE
CURIOUS ENOUGH TO OPEN IT,
JUST THINK ABOUT
YOUR child

BUY A BOX FOR YOUR
gun NOT FOR YOUR kid

If you own a gun for your protection, who's protecting your family from your gun?

Who's making sure that little ones don't discover your weapon and accidentally shoot themselves or another child? More than 500 kids die each year this way, and five times as many are seriously wounded.

Who's keeping your gun safely out of the hands of your teenagers, so they don't see it as a way out when they're depressed? Regrettably, two-thirds of all teen suicides involve firearms.

And who's making sure your handgun isn't stolen by a petty thief, only to turn up later in a far more serious crime?

Perhaps you can be the savior, along with a gun lockbox. They're easy to open when you actually do need your gun—just press a few buttons with a combination you set. And they're not expensive. You'll spend precious little to protect something that's priceless.

So you decide: Would you rather buy a small, metal, foam-lined box for your gun. Or a large, wooden, satin-lined box for your kid?
