

What would it look like...

...for our state to create a language learning system that extended from preschool through graduate school? Join us for an informative and interactive day of exploring the current status of world language teaching and learning in Washington state.

Who Should Attend? Students, teachers, administrators, faculty, community members, business and community leaders, policy makers, and parents – anyone who cares about preparing our students for today's interconnected world.

7:30-8:00 am Registration in the UW HUB Ballroom

8:00-8:30 am Business Panel Breakfast: Why business and community organizations value multilingual employees

8:30-9:20 am Welcome by Anand Yang, Director of the Jackson School of International Studies:

National Context for a Vision of World Language Pathways PK-20. Keynote by Paul Sandrock, former World Languages Consultant with the Wisconsin Department of Public Instruction and past President of the American Council on the Teaching of Foreign Languages

4:00-5:30 pm "Models of Success for World Languages and Global Education" Resource Fair & Pecha Kucha Stage
