ELECTIVE COURSES OFFERED BY Dr. McCormick THROUGH THE DEPT OF MHE

- MHE 511 “Medical Ethics Seminar” (2) A two credit course introducing medical students to methods of case analysis in health care problems & issues.
- MHE 512 “Human Face of Medicine” (2) A two credit course introducing medical students to the role of literature in medicine, utilizing literature written by physicians, and providing an opportunity for original writing.
- MHE 521 “Ethical Challenges of Modern Medicine” (3) A three credit course, interdisciplinary, designed for students in the health professions, provides a methodology and approach to resolving case problems in health care ethics.
- MHE 522 “Ethical Issues Surrounding Death and Dying” (3) Interdisciplinary, examines ethical issues related to death, follows the human life cycle from birth to death, as well as the phenomena of sudden death and suicide.
- MHE 523 “Introduction to Ethics and the Life Sciences” (3) Interdisciplinary, examines current topics in biomedical ethics and the role of ethical theories and principles in attempting to resolve these.
- MHE 517 conjoint with FM 546 “Hospice” (3) The Department of Medical History and Ethics joins with the Department of Family Medicine & local Hospice organizations in providing this interdisciplinary course involving medical students, nursing students, social work students, in learning the art of caring for Hospice patients by training them to serve as Hospice volunteers. This unique course was supported by the Washington State Medical Association with an initial grant of $1,200.00.
- MHE 518 & FM 547 “Spirituality in Health Care” (2) MHE & Fam. Med. co-sponsor this innovative multidisciplinary course designed to assist students in the health professions in identifying the role of spirituality in their own life and work and considering the possible role of spirituality as a resource for patients. Students learn how to take a “spiritual history” with sensitivity, the role of the hospital chaplain, and respect for the diversity of religions and of spiritual pathways. Course directors have applied for a grant from the National Institute for Healthcare Research to support this course and to assist in studying ways to appropriately integrate the themes of this course in the general curriculum. It is noteworthy that some medical students and one RW Johnson scholar at the UW have chosen this general theme for their research projects.
