

Invitation to Support Open Space Seattle 2100

Purpose

- To build on Seattle's open space legacy to maintain urban livability as our population doubles over the next 100 years
- To plan an integrated network of connected open spaces throughout the city
- To design multi-functional, high-performance open spaces that address economic, environmental, recreational, social and health concerns

Components

- Public Speaker series Nov. 2005–May 2006
- City-wide Planning Charrette, Feb. 3 and 4, 2006
- Collaboration with UW Design and Planning Studios
- Published Design and Implementation Plans: Report, Website, Public Presentation, May 2006
- Community Advocacy and Plan Implementation

Intended Outcomes

- A bold, workable vision of an integrated open space system that balances ecological, economic and social needs
- An energized and broadened open space advocacy
- Public understanding of connections between density, livability, open space and health
- Strategies for coordinating implementation through public, private and nonprofit entities
- Near term application to city planning efforts, including the Parks Department Comprehensive Plan Update

Target Participants and Constituencies

- Planners, landscape architects, architects and engineers
- Real estate developers and land use professionals
- Open space, environmental, bicycle, pedestrian, and other advocacy groups
- City agencies and elected officials
- Seattle's citizenry including neighborhood groups and underserved communities
