About the Friends of the Labor Archives

Founded in 2014, the Friends of the Labor Archives mission is to advance the preservation and promotion of labor history through financial support and community outreach for the Labor Archives at the University of Washington.

Since 2010, the Labor Archives has worked to preserve and make accessible the records of working people and their unions, documenting the local, national, and international dimensions of the labor movement.

Members of the Friends receive regular updates on the activities of the Labor Archives. They also receive special invitations to events highlighting the labor history education, outreach and research made possible by the Archives.

The Labor Archives of Washington is been made possible by the grassroots contributions of the labor movement. In that spirit, the financial support pledged by the Friends is an essential part of continuing the work of the Labor Archives into the future.
