- Have you had an accident or near miss on the farm that changed your life?
- Do you want to educate other farmers to prevent similar accidents?

What is it?

The Pacific Northwest Agricultural Safety and Health Center (PNASH) at the University of Washington is partnering with StoryCorps®, a national oral history project, to record the stories of your accidents in order to educate other farmers.

When is it?

The StoryCorps team will be in Washington state to gather recordings at two locations: in Spokane at Radio KPBX 91.1 on Tuesday, February 10; and in Seattle, Thursday, February 12, 2009.

Who can participate?

Anyone who has had an agriculture related accident, injury, illness or near miss which resulted in a significant life lesson that others need to hear.

How does it work?

Once you register, we will contact you to review your story and provide details about the time and place of the recording session. Bring someone close to you to the recording sessions (a family member, friend, or co worker) to help you tell your story. The session will last 40 minutes after which you will receive a CD copy of your recording. With your permission it will be archived at the American Folklife Center at the Library of Congress and used by various agricultural organizations and radio stations to educate other farmers on health and safety.

What is the benefit?

Your story could save a life by preventing another accident like yours and will be preserved for generations to come.

TIME SLOTS ARE LIMITED - REGISTRATION IS REQUIRED
