

The RNA Society - Annual Meeting Sponsorship

Thanks for your interest in sponsoring the Annual Meeting of the RNA Society. This is the premiere meeting for open discussion of the most recent advances in RNA science, methodology, technology, and applications. The RNA Meeting consists of oral and poster presentations in all areas of RNA structure, function, biology and chemistry. The Annual RNA Meetings provide unique opportunities for both young and prominent scientists from industry and academia to meet and discuss current, typically yet-to-be published data, concepts, and methods. In fact, the collegial atmosphere of the RNA Meetings allows for discussions and interactions that, in our experience, seldom occur elsewhere. This conference attracts more than 1,000 participants from around the world, providing a great opportunity for all members of the RNA community to come together to share ideas and methods, to renew old collaborations and to establish new ones.

Corporate involvement in the meeting is through mechanisms that enhance the scientific and intellectual goals of the meeting. In general, this has meant that sponsors provide funds to support key informal interactions, especially those that occur during platform session breaks and poster sessions. The funds may be used for travel fellowships, to fund poster prizes, or to cover the costs of refreshments at the poster sessions. The specifics can be arranged at the time the sponsor contacts the Society, and we are happy to entertain suggestions for how to use the funds in a manner that benefits both the Society and the sponsor.
