

The Walk of Life

By: Julia

The walk never ends. It doesn't matter where you are going. There always seems to be a light at the end, even when you are nowhere near it, even when there are so many obstacles that keep popping up again and again. Since I was a little girl, I've wanted to become a doctor. My dream has always been to help people in the best way that I can. Even though the walk towards my dream seems very long, exhausting and sometimes lonely, it is a walk that I want to complete. I want to reach this goal and get to the light at the end of this road. My most challenging obstacle is myself. The darkness of procrastination, and giving up tends to interrupt my walk. But, lately the light that shines inside of me keeps pulling me back on the road and drawing me closer to that light ahead of me, urging me not to quit. It is beginning to make me want it reach it more than ever. I'm seventeen and I am beginning to see through the darkness. I'm not the scared little girl who was afraid to walk alone to try to reach a light that seems so far away. I don't know my destiny, I don't know how long it will take me to reach my goal, but I will reach it and I know that a beautiful light is waiting for me and I will shine as brightly as it.

Citation: I Julia took this picture using a tri-pod and then downloaded the picture to a Mac computer and used Adobe Photoshop to make the layer effects.

