

Aire turned into one of the larger rallies to date across the nation in support of declaring general amnesty for illegal workers. Hundreds of workers poured into

Desert Aire and congregated for a Sunday morning service where church leaders exhorted them to continue their struggle.

'Even in the midst of stubborn refusal to cooperate with farm

66 Even in the midst of stubborn refusal to cooperate with farm worker demands for income people. justice, we can find things to be alive thankful about. Patricia Linder, Yakima nun 77 worker demands for justice, we can find things to be thankful about," said Sister Patricia Linder, a Yakima nun who travels to Mattawa to work with low-"For hope which keeps the struggle for courage that seems to come exactly when we need it, for work which strengthens our purpose, for laughter which is the best defense against despair.'

The Rev. Carlos Sevilla, bishop of the Catholic diocese based in Yakima, also sent blessings relayed through the Rev. Jose deLoza, priest for Mattawa's Catholic church. Sevilla noted that being a migrant worker involves much suffering, particularly the separations family members endure.

"May the spirit of Christ help us achieve a rich harvest of justice," he said in his message.

Farm workers and their supporters left the park about 11 a.m. bearing the image of the Virgin Mary at the head of the procession and

See Rally, Page A2

Herald/Sharón Steinmann Noe Sitio of Wenatchee walks along Interstate 243 with his sister Elizabeth Sitio, 4, of Mattawa and his wife, Marisol Sitio, of Wenatchee on Sunday during the Mattawa March. A few thousand from all over Washington state and Oregon turned out to promote amnesty for undocumented workers.