Forum on higher education financing:
The state legislative session is starting up in January. Higher ed financing is a serious problem. One possible solution is “Pay it Forward.” It’s potentially on the legislative agenda, likely to be introduced by Larry Seaquist, chair of the higher education committee. We could sponsor a forum on this. The AAUP leadership is divided on this issue, some feeling it is not a perfect enough solution. The idea was launched by John Burbank, of Washington’s own Economic Opportunity Institute, and has been discussed by legislators around the country. UW vice-provost Paul Jenny has expressed opposition to this, see his posting on the web (http://www.afthighered.org/wp-content/uploads/2013/10/Pay-it-Forward-Coalition-Statement.pdf)

What should the forum look like?
We could call for short proposals to have people present ideas or participate.
We'd like to invite Bill Zumeta in the Evans School.
Privatization and self-sustaining programs should also be discussed—is that the same as “tuition flexibility?”
We should have a student on the panel.
We should include presentation of alternative/progressive proposals like John Burbank.
Should we include UW administrator participation?

Timeline?
This is a long-term discussion, so we don’t need to influence the January start of the legislative session.
Half a day session of educational agenda.
Add an organizational component as well?
Mid winter? Or early spring quarter? If we had a lunch service first it could comprise our annual meeting.

TO DO: Dan will sketch this out and bring it to our next meeting.

Extension Lecturer Union issue
Richard Moore and Mi Hala, of the AFT-UW chapter (Local 6486, English Language Faculty) came to talk about the contract negotiations underway since March 2012 with their union. The talks have occasionally stalled. In fall of 2013, the UW issued a last/best/final offer. The offer proposes a system where they are “stack-ranked” annually (70-80 faculty) to determine the hiring list. Until this proposal, the list has been based on seniority. That has worked fairly well, and is obviously very transparent. Job stability would be replaced by the stacked-rank system. Elsewhere on campus, faculty evaluations are based on student rankings, publications, UW & broader service, and collegial assessment. Three professional staff supervisors would conduct the proposed stacked rankings. These lecturers are classified as “academic staff,” invented uniquely for this group of employees. While academic personnel, Local 6486 members are not exactly faculty. While the UW has salary minimums ($3,206/month for 15 contact hours per week, full time work) for academic personnel, most 6486 members are paid below those minimums, since 2006. A limited number of annual contracts are extended (33%), and the rest are on quarterly contracts. Some people are teaching quarterly for 15 years. These people are in such a precarious position that if the legislature had decided to reduce benefits for part time personnel, that would have eliminated their benefits. Most people work summers. It’s a self-sustaining degree program, so all contracts are dependent on enrolment. The union is asking for more job stability, so personnel can count on some future. There are problems of compression, especially with long-term underpayment.
Their next steps? The union filed for mediation. The UW declined to go mediation. Apparently, an impasse could be declared and the administration could implement its final offer.

It’s unclear who are the deciders. Is Mindy Kornberg the decider?

The lecturers wrote a letter to Ana Mari Cauce (30 Sept 2013), a copy of which was circulated. A meeting was held this morning between admin and the union to explore next steps.

Duane asked about the sum total of annual salary bill for this program. [data provided after the meeting: $2.5 mil/year (as a percentage of the dept. annual revenue, lecturer salaries have gone down from over 28% of the dept. revenue to about 24% in 2011)]

How many faculty won’t get renewed in a year? In fact, PCE has having trouble finding people for these jobs, suggesting they should be long-term positions. What’s the motivation for this policy?

Apparently the English department didn’t want to run this program any more (30 years ago?), and this classification group was “kicked out” of the department faculty group. These historical decisions probably have some role.

Pickets have been held to draw attention to the problem.

There was a motion to write a letter from AAUP to the UW in support of the union. We could ask the UW to reconsider its positions.

Self sustaining programs that bring in their own money think they don’t need oversight. Support for state-supported programs declines, shifting authority and accountability. PCE has a corporate culture, it’s not run by academics. The lecturers have no academic freedom to speak of. See appended letter detailing some of the issues.

Janelle noted we needed to connect the dots to AAUP core principles of academic freedom. It helps everyone see the potential consequences for all of us.

The librarians are thinking of asking for faculty status. Class A legislation could be sufficient. This might be a good moment to turn these academic personnel into faculty as well.

Is there a middle ground between pure seniority ranking and pure merit ranking? Neither is entirely suitable.

As the university moves more of its programs towards PCE administration, we need to keep an eye on these things. PCE brings in many foreign students for year-long programs.

TO DO: 1) Explore Faculty Senate resolution declaring them faculty because they are crucial to the educational mission of the university (long term), and/or 2) Write a AAUP Board statement of support for mediation (sticking to our mission & purpose) and/or 3) Post informational material on the list server, and/or 4) Prepare a Class C resolution for vote in Faculty Senate and/or 5) Participate in pickets.

Bylaws
Elliot Swanson and Amy Hagopian presented draft bylaws (see attachment 3). We discussed issues of term limits, dues schedule, the need for a Membership Secretary. Amy will circulate new language (appended) and we will vote on line.
Treasurer report
Janelle circulated a treasurer report (see attachment 2). We are nudging people move towards payroll deduction at the UW rather than joining directly at national. That is our tried and true method to know who our members are. We received an $80 check from national as our return on members who bypassed the local chapter and joined at national. Janelle receives a bill each year for 100% of our dues revenue.
As a state conference, we could apply to national for funds to do activities (such as our higher ed financing seminar).

Seattle U inaugural meeting
Jay reported he attended the first AAUP chapter meeting at Seattle U. About 80 were present. They seem to have been inspired by the Summer Institute and a chancellor who seems to be focused on basketball.

Faculty survey
Jack reported there is a policy for using the faculty email list. The origins of the policy are unclear. All distributions lists are for use by Faculty Senate only, except as approved by the secretary. Purposes and frequency are considerations. Is our survey consistent with the UW values and standards, and is it consistent with UW mission? There may be some questions on the survey that she will object to. We want a comprehensive list (full and part time faculty). Marcia Killien gave Amy a list last spring of part time lecturers for the adjunct forum (636 names), but we won’t use that without permission.

Adjunct faculty position elimination
Rob and Dan were involved in meeting with a department chair on behalf of a lecturer whose position after many years was eliminated. They reported on the meeting.

APPENDICES TO MINUTES:

1. letter from AFT to Provost

Dear Provost Cauce,

We applaud you for your work with the Faculty Senate on improving conditions for faculty in general, but particularly for UW Lecturers.

With this in mind, we want to draw your attention to a matter of grave concern relating to the apparent disdain for the professional status of academic staff and disregard for their work within the UW.

We are approximately 70 full-time Extension Lecturers, teaching in International and English Language Programs, in Educational Outreach. We form the American Federation of Teachers/University of Washington English Language Faculty, Local #6486.

As you are no doubt aware, we:

• Teach approximately 3500 matriculated and non-matriculated students annually;

• Enhance the reputation of the UW by presenting at peer-reviewed, international conferences; authoring textbooks; and training English Language Teachers;

• Promote the UW as a global institution by teaching students who come from over 30 countries;

• Develop the research and teaching mission of the UW by training over 70 International Teaching Assistants (ITAs) a year, a large proportion in STEM disciplines;

• Work closely with the English Department to train and provide support for 12 Teaching Assistants (TAs) for the MATESOL Program in the English Department, as well as a 25% FTE Assistant Professor:

- Support the teaching mission of numerous departments and schools, including the Foster School of Business and the Jackson School of International Studies, by providing English language support for international students in Specialized International Programs;

- Support the mission of the UW by providing more than $800,000 annually in operating costs, and returning more than $200,000 annually to the UW.\(^1\) Notwithstanding all of the above, the fact remains that, at present, we have no contract with the UW and, astonishingly, the contractual negotiations have been ongoing for two years. Although we are not discussing details of our negotiations, we are deeply troubled by both the process and its outcome since little progress has been made. This leads us to question our status within the university. Some of the specific issues that concern us are:

- We are academic teaching staff; however, we are evaluated by non-academic professional staff (including, potentially, by staff without teaching qualifications);

- Prior to this year, as Academic Staff, we were grouped with other UW Lecturers, though we have not been paid the minimum for this category;

- This September, we have been re-grouped with Teaching Associates, with an even lower minimum salary, which nevertheless, we still do not receive\(^2\); \(^1\) Averages for FYs 2007-2011.

September 30, 2013

- In the absence of a contract, we are the only UW employees not to have received a raise this year. We have not received any raises since 2008;

- We are also the only UW employees who, under current UW proposals, would be “rewarded” for their experience and service to the university by all having to re-apply for their positions every quarter, or at least every year;

- Under current UW proposals, meritorious Extension Lecturers who have served for more than 15 years would be “rewarded” for their service to the university by all receiving the smallest raises (2%). In light of this, it appears that our academic work is simply not valued by the university administration, and that our part of the profession is to be disregarded and belittled. In simple terms, it is difficult to avoid the conclusion that we are regarded as an easily marginalized group of (predominantly female) “academic staff”\(^3\) who can be exploited. Though first and foremost we wish to better our working conditions, and we would appreciate your support for a fair contract, we also believe that our treatment erodes the very integrity and academic principles of the University of Washington: we fear that we are experiencing first-hand a transformation that threatens the status of the UW as a world class university. We appeal to you to help reverse this steady degradation in our position and standing within the university. We are ready to meet with you at your earliest convenience. Thank you. Rozanna Carosella, rococa@uw.edu Mihaela Giurca, mihaela@uw.edu Alex Jones, lexjones@uw.edu Peter Messinger, ptrm@uw.edu Richard Moore, richm@uw.edu Kim Newcomer, kpn@uw.edu American Federation of Teachers/University of Washington English Language Faculty, Local #6486.

\(^2\) At current salary levels, the children of an Extension Lecturer, with a graduate degree and more than 10 years of teaching experience at UW, would qualify for free/reduced lunch in the Seattle Public Schools.  We are marginalized even in our job classification: anyone at UW teaching a foreign language at the same level, and with the same qualifications is classed as a “lecturer”.

2. Treasurer’s report

AAUP-UW Finances Report, 10/16/2013
Janelle S. Taylor, Treasurer

Background:

Some members join via payroll deduction, and those dues are deposited into our local account. Some members join via AAUP National and those dues are held by the National organization. We send 89% of locally-collected dues to the National organization, retaining 11% for support of local chapter activities. National occasionally sends us a check, but we do not have clarity about the number of members currently paying dues via National, nor about the formula by which dues paid to National are shared with the chapter.

AAUP-UW maintains two accounts at WSECU:

1. "organizational savings" account, current balance: $5,138.91
   This is a separate savings account
2. "money mover" checking account, current balance: $7,721
   This is the account into which dues paid via payroll deduction are automatically deposited.

   Total dues collected via payroll deposit in 2012: $15,154.57
   Total dues collected via payroll deposit in 2013: $17,782.95

   Total payroll-deduction dues retained in 2012 (=11%): $1667.00
   Total payroll-deduction dues retained in 2013 (=11%): $1956.13

Membership:

1. Number of members paying dues via payroll deduction in 2012 = 86
   Number of members paying dues via payroll deduction in 2013 = 97
   PLUS 3 more who signed up after June = 100 !!!!

   About half of our 14 new payroll members are lecturers of one or another sort

2. Number of members paying dues directly to National, estimate = 41
   Total dues received from National in 2012: $152
   Total dues received from National in 2013: $80

Treasurer To-Do List:
1. Contact each current members, invite them to continue (or consider initiating) payroll deduction as one option for membership & ask them to self-identify appropriate dues-band for 2014
2. Prepare list of members wishing payroll-deduction and amounts to be deducted, to pass on to the Payroll office (before January)
3. Proposed bylaws

The committee shall also recruit new members and encourage the maintenance of membership.
