

Rick Bonus is associate professor of American Ethnic Studies, Asian American and Pacific Islander American Studies, the director of the Diversity Minor Program, and an adjunct professor of Communication, Southeast Asian Studies, and in the Center for Multicultural Education. He obtained his Ph.D. in Communication from the University of California, San Diego. He is the author of Locating Filipino Americans: Ethnicity and the Cultural Politics of Space (Temple Univ. Press, 2000), co-editor of Contemporary Asian American Communities: Intersections and Divergences (Temple Univ. Press, 2002), and writer of several essays on the politics of culture and representation in American society. He is currently the president of the Association for Asian American Studies and the faculty director of several undergraduate mentor partnership programs at the University of Washington.