Promoting public health research, policy, practice, and education is the mission of the American Journal of Public Health. We invite contributions of original unpublished research, opinion and commentary, departments, and letters to the editor. For specific guidelines, please visit the Journal Web site.

Cover: Frank B. Harvey, a Navajo healer, carefully sniffs herbs to identify them. This image was selected to draw attention to the vital health traditions and current health inequalities of indigenous people worldwide. We wish to extend special thanks to Michael Bird, immediate past president of the American Public Health Association, for his tireless commitment to advancing indigenous health, and for graciously serving as the guest editor of this issue of the Journal.
