Promoting public health research, policy, and practice is the mission of the American Journal of Public Health. As we widen our scope to embrace global issues, we also sharpen our focus to support the needs of public health practitioners. We invite contributions of original unpublished research, opinions and commentary, departments, and letters to the editor.

Gover, a young girl in the neighborhood of Cité-Soleil in her bucket filled with water in Port-au-Prince, Haiti on Saturday, April 20, 1996. This water facility, which had been in operation for five years at the time this photograph was taken, provided over 150,000 gallons (or 35,000 buckets of water) per day to the residents of this neighborhood for cooking and cleaning, thus helping to reduce the occurrence of diseases, such as cholera, that are common in slum areas.
