14 A Conversation with the Drug Czar
Interview conducted by Ria Romano
John P. Walters speaks candidly about the issues concerning addiction treatment professionals today — and shares his thoughts on the new anti-drug strategy, targeted spending, grassroots organizations, and special initiatives for minorities.

COVER STORY & FEATURES

18 Hope on the Horizon: Biotech's New Solutions
Ria Romano with Vicki Brower
Anyone who has ever tried to kick a habit like alcohol or cocaine has probably wondered why it is possible to clone a sheep but not develop more effective ways to treat addiction. However, advances in both neuroscience and pharmacology are yielding new hope. Find out what pharmacologic therapies biotech companies are working on to complement behavioral therapy.

30 Resistance and Recovery: Treating Antisocial Personality Disorder
Ted R. Watkins, DSW, LMSW-ACP
There is a synergistic interaction between mental disorders and substance abuse. Therefore, it is essential that both disorders be addressed in treatment. This article focuses on Antisocial Personality Disorder — a client that is particularly resistant to change — and may require amended treatment goals.

38 The Role of the Frontline Clinician
Sebastian A. Williams, MSED, LCPC
Verifying benefits and completing admissions consume the energies of many frontline clinicians in public and private settings. Identifying chaotic systems, prioritizing interventions, and empowering clients should begin during pretreatment, while moving the focus from pathologizing to facilitating growth and self-sufficiency. The next revolution in behavioral healthcare must involve a drastic overhaul of front-end systems.
