FEATURES

22 Healing the Traumas of Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual, and Transgender (LGBT) Substance Abusers
Dana G. Finnegan, PhD, CAC, and Emily B. McNally, PhD, CAC
Substance abuse counselors working with LGBT clients stand in a crucially important position. An examination of the interplay between the traumatic effects of substance abuse and the oppression of LGBT individuals lies at the heart of how to best help your LGBT clients.

34 What If They Aren’t Ready? Increasing Motivation for Treatment
Douglas L. Pelchin, EdD, MFT
Lack of motivation is one of the biggest challenges facing treatment providers. How counselors respond to low motivation or a mixed commitment to recovery is therefore a critical issue. This article explores how Motivational Enhancement Therapy interventions can be invaluable as a means of reenergizing motivation for change and hope for recovery.

28 Harm Reduction in Clinical Practice
Stanton Peele, PhD, JD
Harm reduction is a term best known in the substance abuse field as a way of reforming drug policy. Dr. Peele challenges the 12-Step approach by suggesting harm reduction is a treatment strategy that also may be appropriate for alcoholics.

40 A Natural Prescription for Addiction
M. Linda Bell, ICADC, FACATA, CCS, and Connie Martin
With everything we know about addiction today, why is it that we often miss the importance of something so basic as food as a key component in long-term recovery? Teach your clients to respect and nourish their body—and a rebirth of their spirit will follow.
