NATIONAL SURVEY: HOW HAVE THE FEDERAL FUNDING CUTS TO PUBLIC HEALTH PROGRAMS AFFECTED YOU AND THE COMMUNITIES YOU SERVE?

In addition to last year's devastating cuts, the President's 2007 budget proposed cutting funding for the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) by more than 2% and the Health Resources Services Administration (HRSA) by almost 5%. His budget eliminated or entirely cut several important public health programs like the National Children's Study, the Preventive Health & Health Services Block Grant, HRSA Health Professions Grant Programs, and those that address chronic disease prevention.

As the American Public Health Association plans appropriations visits and develop materials, CCPH members’ answers to the questions in this survey will help give a picture of the impact of last year’s cuts on vital public health programs and the communities they serve.

25 NEW PRACTICUM PARTNERSHIP PROGRAM AWARDS MADE TO SCHOOLS OF SOCIAL WORK NATIONWIDE

The Social Work Leadership Institute (SWLI) at the New York Academy of Medicine has announced grants to 25 schools of social work, including three consortia, as part of the Practicum Partnership Program (PPP) Adoption Initiative. The $75,000, three-year awards will help to develop university-community partnerships to provide master’s of social work (MSW) students with aging-rich field experiences across the continuum of care.

The SWLI was established to ensure that older adults have an opportunity to stay in charge of their own lives by training and advocating for a qualified social work labor force. The SWLI cultivates leaders in the field of social work and acts as a central agent in cultivating and enhancing multidisciplinary partnerships to succeed.

PPP awards will be matched with at least $75,000 by participating schools.
These grants build on the work of the initial six pilot sites and ten expansion grants awarded in July 2005, and are part of a program to bring PPP to 60 MSW programs nationwide.

The following schools were awarded implementation grants:

- Adelphi University, New York
- Baylor University, Texas
- Boston College, Massachusetts
- Boston University, Massachusetts
- California State, Chico
- Case Western Reserve University, Ohio
- Florida State University
- Michigan State University
- Rutgers, State University of New Jersey
- University of Connecticut
- University of Denver Graduate School of Social Work (Colorado)
- University of Iowa
- University of Kansas
- University of Kentucky
- University of Montana
- University of Nebraska at Omaha
- University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill
- University of Washington
- Widener University, Pennsylvania

The three consortia funded are:

- SUNY Brockport and SUNY Buffalo, New York
- Loyola University and University of Chicago, Illinois
- Texas State University, San Marcos and the University of Texas at Austin

For more information about the PPP, please see http://www.jhartfound.org/ideas/PPP/ or www.socialworkleadership.org

MESSAGE FROM OUR EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

Rewriting promotion and tenure policies to recognize and reward faculty who engage with communities? Who says it can’t be done? Faculty at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill School of Dentistry have done just that in adopting new policies that go into effect in July 2006!

The new policies, available at: http://depts.washington.edu/ccph/scholarship.html#Models, embrace public service, community engagement and community-engaged scholarship and demonstrate a variety of ways to build these valued into promotion and tenure policies at a public research university:

Defining scholarship: Quoting directly from Boyer, the policies acknowledge that scholarship can take multiple forms: "The scholarship of teaching includes transmitting, transforming and extending knowledge. The scholarship of discovery refers to the pursuit of inquiry and investigation in search of new knowledge. The scholarship of integration consists of making connections across disciplines and, through this synthesis, advancing what we know. The scholarship of application asks how knowledge can be practically applied in a dynamic process whereby new understandings emerge from the act of applying knowledge through an ongoing cycle of theory to practice to theory. The scholarship of engagement connects any of the above dimensions of scholarship to the understanding and solving of pressing social, civic and ethical problems.”

Distinguishing service from community engagement: Previously, the School of Dentistry defined service as most academic institutions do: as service to the academy and the profession. The new policies also include community and public service and engagement.

Further, they distinguish service from community engagement by stating that “service implies a donor-recipient relationship in which one party, generally the community, receives benefit from interaction with the faculty member” whereas “community engagement is the application of institutional resources to address and solve challenges facing communities through collaboration with these communities”, as defined by the 2005 report of the Commission on Community-Engaged Scholarship in the Health Professions. The defining aspect of engagement is the collaboration and mutuality of benefits.

Where previously, faculty members were encouraged to serve the community at large in a professional capacity that enhances the stature of the University, faculty are now encouraged to serve in a professional or leadership capacity that enhances the health of the public. A number of examples are given in the policies, including building partnerships with communities to develop and diversify the health workforce, delivering community-based quality health care and translating research into practice and policy and disseminating research findings to communities.

Distinguishing between community service and community-engaged scholarship: The new policies are clarify the difference between service and scholarship. “Service and engagement activities are important ways in which a faculty member connects the resources of the University to social and health issues faced in society. However, service and engagement activities are considered as scholarship unless they are formal and meet the criteria for Scholarly Activity.”

Clarifying what constitutes documentation and evidence: The policies spell out that community engagement and community-engaged scholarship is evaluated by the candidate's CV (including a new section for listing community engagement activities), the chair's letter, and letters from community partners which have benefited from the faculty collaboration. The critical assessment of the faculty member's community-engaged scholarship can include not only peer-reviewed journal articles, but also “non-traditional products of scholarship and research, including policy reports, websites, videos, and other peer-reviewed outcomes.”

Of course, progressive policies are only one component of a strategy to align the faculty promotion and tenure system with community engagement and community-engaged scholarship. Time will tell whether a school with such policies has the faculty support and institutional culture to implement what appears on paper. The Community-Engaged Scholarship for Health Collaborative, a group of 9 health professional schools that are working on these issues (including the School of Dentistry at UNC), has identified other components, such as investing in faculty development that:

- educates faculty about community engagement and community-engaged scholarship: what it is, why do it and how to do it;
- educates members of promotion & tenure committees on these same issues, and how to assess the portfolio of a community-engaged scholar;
- helps faculty to see the possibilities for scholarship in their service and community engagement, and to help them make that leap;
- mentors faculty in the competencies needed for community-engaged scholarship; and
- mentors faculty to successfully navigate the promotion and tenure process and effectively document their work.

If your school or university has progressive promotion and tenure policies that we should add to our online collection, please email me at sarena@u.washington.edu

CCPH Executive Director Sarena Seifer Appointed to National Advisory Panel for New Carnegie Elective Classification on Community Engagement

Higher educational institutions that are engaged with community can now apply to the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching for a new elective classification for Community Engagement. The National Advisory Panel will support the review process for the first year. The classification represents a significant affirmation of the importance of community engagement in the agenda of higher education. For more information, visit www.carnegiefoundation.org/classifications/sub.asp?key=785&subkey=1061.

Questions about the community engagement classification can be sent to Amy Driscoll at driscoll@carnegiefoundation.org.

Community Leaders Convened on April 24 - 26 for Summit at the Wingspread Conference Center in Racine, Wisconsin

The overall purpose of the invitational Summit was to advance authentic community-higher education partnerships by mobilizing a network of experienced community partners. Convened by CCPH, the Summit was co-sponsored by the WK Kellogg Foundation, the Johnson Foundation, and Atlantic Philanthropies and supported by the Community-Based Public Health Caucus of the American Public Health Association, the National Community-Based Organization Network and the National Community Committee of the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention's Prevention Research Centers Program. Forthcoming issues of Partnership Matters newsletter will feature articles about Summit outcomes. Building Healthy Communities in Environmental Justice Areas

The BHCEJA model is evidenced base and requires assessment, critical thinking, systematic planning and the reconceptualization of disease. The BHCEJA model is a biopsychosocial health model with an environmental health component that: requires a health assessment of the community based upon standardized health indicators and area based socioeconomic measures; and an assessment of the risk from the environmental burden (TRI chemicals released into the community) of the community.
