Even If Everyone Votes, Tie Is Best Truman May Get

By Archibald M. Crossley

NEW YORK, Sept. 18.—If every potential voter in the United States should cast a ballot on election day—which is statistically impossible—the likely chances for Truman's election would only be about even.

These are the poll figures for choices by all adult citizens:

Truman	39 per cent
Dewey	39 per cent
Others	7 per cent
Undecided	15 per cent

These figures were obtained from a careful cross-section of all types of American citizens of voting age, regardless of sex, income level, color, where they live and whether they intend to vote.

Some of the 84 million potential voters represented cannot vote temporarily because they have not lived long enough in their present location. Some reside in Washington, D. C., where residents do not vote. Some have not paid a poll tax.

Millions of them normally just will not take the trouble to register and vote.

Out of these 84 million potential voters, the best current estimate is that 54 million will vote and 30 million will not. In general, the greater the vote, the greater the Democratic chance. With this fact in mind, the President recently has appealed for a large turnout.

The poll results would indicate that the Democrats, to win reelection, President Truman, cannot rely solely upon voters out of the vote. Their chances for success on November 2 depend upon either (a) their ability to attract voters from other candidates, or (b) the voters themselves.

Workers to Be Placed As Positions Available

By William Schabas

Five thousand returning workers manning in the gray line at the Boeing airplane plant today were assigned to their jobs at the end of a strike that lasted nearly five months.

Members of the American Mechanical Union (A.M.U.) had not previously returned to work since the strike began last April 22, 1943.

At the end of the day, more than 1,000 strikers had been given job assignments. Boeing officials estimated that not all of those who had not yet returned to work would be given later reporting dates, according to A. F. Logan, industrial relations director.

A total of 1,000, including the 1,000 who had returned to work, were given job assignments today over the weekend.

The other way for strikers returning to work is by being reassigned to other positions. The latter was the plan used by Boeing officials and all those returning surrendered their old plant identification badges.

Notification Will Be Given By Telegram

"We are pleased at the good spirit displayed by the majority of those who reported at the plant this morning," Logan said. "The company will advise those who return with good will and friendliness."

Logan added that it is not necessary for them who have registered to report again until they receive notification by telegram. They will be placed, he said, as rapidly as job assignments can be made in the sequence needed.

The influx of returning strikers began at 8:30 a. m. when Harold Olson, local president of the American Mechanical Union, gave the word. "Attention please!" he bellowed a warning to the crowd of about a post across 10th Ave. B. from the Boeing plant. "This is Olson speaking. The picket lines have been removed and you are to go to the factory. It is time to work."

Men and women strikers streamed through a roped-off runway to a

LONGMIRE, Mount Rainier Park, Sept. 13. — A Tacoma girl, missing from a climbing party high up the southeast slope of Mount Rainier for more than 24 hours, was being sought by national park rangers today.

For several hours after the search was under way her identity was not known. But tonight John C. Preston, park superintendent, reported that she is 17-year-old Elizabeth Bryant of 1021 N. 4th St.

FOREST FIRE MENACING 2 CALIF. TOWNS

OJAI, Calif., Sept. 13. — (AP) A forest fire that swept into this valley town of 3,500 persons was believed to have been brought under control tonight after having burned to within two blocks of the town, firemen said.

Pete Lutze, chief of the Ventura fire department, said the fire was subdued after the wind, which earlier had whipped it into the town, died down.

He said between 35 and 50 houses, including some of the largest and finest in the community, were destroyed, 19 of them in one block.

The flames, which have covered an area of 12,000 to 15,000 acres of chaparral and scrub oak in Los Padres National Forest, had burned a town of Ventura's Hot Springs, but were still threatening Ventura Oaks, another settlement near the town.

Women and children were evacuated from Ojai, leaving only men capable of fighting the flames.

The evacuation was headed at Ventura Oaks, women and children being taken to the Ventura city auditorium, where the Red Cross disaster relief took over the big ballroom to feed the stragglers and bed them for the night.

First estimates on property damage in Ojai ranged upward from 1 million dollars.

Secretary of State Marshall's note finally rejected the Soviet's any back to the wholly unsubstantiated accusations made against the Federal Bureau of investigation and the welfare of the teachers.

The department went through the formality of asking the Soviet embassy for information as to the official dates upon which the Soviet consulate in New York and San Francisco had been closed. The U. S. consulate at Vladivostok was closed August 27.
