Abstract

This proposal has two goals; to replace four aging STF purchased Macintosh (eBeige¹ G3 workstations, and to replace two scanners used for digital imaging. Macintoshes remain the standard for digital imaging and desktop publishing, and the current workstations are no longer capable of effectively running the latest digital imaging software. They will also not be able to effectively run OS X, the new Macintosh operating system that will be available within the year. The Macintosh workstations are three years old, and the scanners are four and five years old.

Background

CARTAH is a project-based lab open to all students at the University of Washington, with preference given to students in the arts and humanities. CARTAH is a unique resource on campus, and provides an extensive array of computer, imaging, audio, video equipment, and technical advice to students who wish to work on individual and group projects or research. Projects range from simple scanning and imaging work completed in a few days to extensive video and audio projects spanning several quarters.

Benefits

Students have initiated over three quarters of CARTAH projects, and over half of these projects are imaging or multimedia based. Most of these projects are conducted on Macintosh workstations, and require scanning equipment. The intent of this proposal is to replace aging equipment used for digital imaging and desktop publishing. We wish to replace four 3-year old STF purchased (eBeige¹ G3 300MHz workstations with four Dual Processor G4 500MHz workstations. The current G3 Macintosh workstations are reaching the end of their useful lifespan as digital imaging stations, and will not be capable of effectively running the next generation Macintosh operating system OS X, which is due sometime in the next year. We also hope to replace one four year old flatbed scanner and one five year old slide scanner with current scanners of much higher resolution and image quality.

All STF purchased workstations that are replaced will be made available to other groups or departments as per the agreement made between the STF committee and the College of Arts and Sciences.

Student Access

Access to CARTAH is available to all students, faculty and staff of the University of Washington who submit a structured research proposal. This can be done simply from CARTAH's web site. Students are offered help in constructing cogent research proposals, and virtually all student research proposals are accepted. CARTAH is open from 8:30 to 4:30 every weekday.

Available Resources

CARTAH consists of two working labs in two buildings, suites 9 and 35 Thomson Hall, and 12 Music Building. CARTAH provides three permanent technical support staff, a permanent office support person, four Graduate Student Assistants, and a number of workstudy students, all available to advise students and support the labs. These labs already have extensive video, graphics, audio, and animation facilities funded through industry grants, CARTAH and univeristy funds, as well as previous STF grants. New equipment would be integrated into these labs, and would enhance an already successful program of independent student research. CARTAH also has an annual supplies budget of $35,000 used to support these labs.

Installation Timeline

CARTAH will purchase and install new equipment as soon as funds become available.

Departmental Endorsement

CARTAH is an independent computing center within the College of Arts and Humanities. This proposal is endorsed by CARTAH's director, Professor Richard Karpen.

Student Endorsement

CARTAH has over 100 current, ongoing projects being conducted by graduate or undergraduate students, nearly 50 of them added this academic year. Of these projects, over half are graphics or multimedia based projects. Below is a sampling of current student based projects that would benefit from the proposed equipment. The project descriptions are taken from the original project proposals. A complete listing of approved CARTAH projects can be found on our web site at: <http://www.washington.edu/cartah/projects>.

pretty people in their spaces.circles of confusion

I wish to break down the myths of models being flawless and untouchable which leads so many women to feel insecure. A fashion shoot is the contributions of many talented people working to make these girls look in a certain way. I want people to see the transformation of these girls that I do. Through photographing models both in their home, how they wish to be shot and on a 'fashion shoot', I believe I can present a more accurate idea of what goes on in the fashion scene.

Scrapbook/Portfolio: Alone in Japan

In January and February of this year I took my first solo trip to Japan.

I took pictures on slide film of my trip, and kept the little scraps and bits that are the detritus of travel - ticket stubs, receipts, that kind of thing. My project is to convert my slides and scraps into digital information, and then create a booklet that will be both travel scrapbook and photography portfolio.

Some of the best work I have ever done since I began taking pictures was done on that strange and wonderful trip.

MFA thesis

Through the use of digital and traditional means I plan to create collages of imagery. I will be exploring the genres of portraiture and contemplative imagery. Scanning large format negatives at CARTAH will aid in my transfer of this imagery to lithographic plates. The final pieces will be mixed media collages on paper.

mail art website

I am collaborating with Carrie Scanga, a graduate in the printmaking department. we plan on hosting a website to document various and unusual items sent to us through the us postal service. this project is a comment on the tangibility and limits of traditional mail versus the impersonal and 2d aspects of email and the World Wide Web. if at all possible we would like to work with Peter Bill for he is familiar with the project and is also a colleague of ours.

Digital Created Art of Movement and Motion

The project consists taking photographs of various scenes. The idea is to capture the narrative of a scene through photographs, and then digitally combine the images into one work of art. This project is to be a part of my Master of Fine Art degree.
