Lindsay grew up in Shelton and graduated from Shelton High School. In 2010, she graduated from the University of Washington with Bachelor of Arts Degrees in Spanish and in Ancient Near Eastern Studies. She is attending her first year of medical school at WSU-Spokane.

Lindsay keeps in close contact with her parents, who live in Shelton, and her sister, who recently graduated from the Evergreen State College. In her spare time, she enjoys snowboarding, cooking, and practicing ballet, and she has a growing interest in organic gardening. Lindsay is motivated to pursue a career in medicine because she hopes to help alleviate health care disparities like those she observed while growing up in Shelton and while living in Guatemala. She plans to practice Internal Medicine after she finishes medical school and residency.

The goal of Washington TRUST is to allow for a focused medical school experience in underserved care, with the eventual goal of returning physicians to practice in the underserved areas of Washington. Washington TRUST scholars will have multiple opportunities to experience first-hand the joys and satisfaction of practicing medicine in an underserved community.
