The great floods carved out a "coulee" revealing a stunning display of layers of basalt rock, hence the name of the city. In addition to this geological wonder, the Grand Coulee Area offers many adventures for outdoor enthusiasts. Lake Roosevelt and Banks Lake are two of the most beautiful and vast lakes in Washington. Fishing, boating, swimming, picnicking, and water sports can be found on both of these great reservoirs. The coulee walls and unique landscape of the area offer excellent hiking trails and rock climbing. The area also offers abundant wildlife and bird viewing, nature walks, camping, hunting, horseback riding, and golf.

The Grand Coulee Dam Project began in 1933 when President Roosevelt included Grand Coulee in his public works program to ease joblessness, provide irrigation to the surrounding desert areas, and for the production of electricity. Built from 1933 to 1975, it is 550 feet tall, from the 500 foot wide polished granite base, to the 30 foot wide crest which supports a paved two lane road. When you include the third power house, Grand Coulee Dam is almost one mile long and more than twice as tall as Niagara Falls. It is the 3rd largest producer of electric power in the world and the largest concrete structure in the US. The reservoir behind it is called (Franklin Delano) Roosevelt Lake. In the summer, the nightly laser show has become one of the community's leading attractions.
