GET THE BALL ROLLING: EARLY IDENTIFICATION AND INTERVENTION IN AUTISM

A conversation and lunch with UW Autism Center clinician-researchers

Jessica Greenson, Ph.D., and Ashley Penney, Ph.D., BCBA-D

THURSDAY, JUNE 15, 2017

11:30 A.M.–1 P.M.

UW MEDICINE AT SOUTH LAKE UNION

850 REPUBLICAN ST., SEATTLE, WA

The UW Autism Center is a national leader in early identification and intervention. Join two of the center's clinician-researchers to learn about the latest discoveries and their implications for treating children with autism spectrum disorder (ASD).

Jessica Greenson, Ph.D., is a licensed psychologist and the director of clinical services at the UW Autism Center. Dr. Greenson has devoted her career to understanding autism across childhood via the longitudinal study of children with ASD.

Ashley Penney, Ph.D., BCBA-D, is the director of ABA (applied behavioral analysis) Services and a behavior and education consultant at the UW Autism Center. Dr. Penney has experience in early intervention, applied behavior analysis, challenging behaviors and supporting children with autism in educational settings.
