

The Ethics of Collaboration

According to the BACB Ethics Code, "behavior analysts collaborate with colleagues from their own and other professions in the best interest of the client and stakeholders." However, the average BCBA receives little to no formal training on how effectively and ethically collaborate despite often functioning as part of a multi-disciplinary team. This presentation will explore ethical considerations for collaboration using the BACB ethics code and interviews with other providers from a variety of disciplines.

Course Objectives:

After attending this workshop, participants will be able to:

- Identify the sections of the BACB ethics code which relate to collaboration
- Explain considerations for collaboration as identified by other service providers
- Apply the BACB ethics code to collaboration with other service providers

Who should attend: Board certified behavior analysts with any level of experience.

Content level: All levels

BACB CEUs: 2 Ethics CEUs included
